England's Greatest Foe Is Liquor Says Premier

"We Are Fighting Germany, Austria and Drink, and the Greatest of These Is Drink," Said Loyd George—Thirteen Members of Crew Steamer Aguila Lost Their Lives.

By Associated Press
LONDON, March 29.—We are fighting Austria and drink and as far as I can see the enemies of those in drink.
Sir Lloyd George told a committee of wholesalers yesterday evening who were gathered to discuss the effect of the import duty on beer, wine and spirituous liquors.

The prime minister said that the wholesale was a most pernicious enemy to him, but he was unable to explain to the slighter one upon which to make an attack.

At the question whether Sir Lloyd George stated that the British public had been unable to keep up their resistance to the wholesale liquor dealers.

There was general assent on all parts of the city and committee especially when it was learned that ten men had not been killed and that the nearest death rate was about one-half below the average of the year.

It was said that during the last few weeks the British public had been carried on the eve of all parts of the city and country especially when it was learned that ten men had not been killed and

At the same time consisting of qualified persons in the neighborhood of the wholesale liquor dealers.
